Kurzbeschreibung

Hans Kollhoff's work is considered among the most ambitious and challenging to be found in the contemporary architecture of the German-speaking countries. Its strength is derived from a deliberate reference to the benchmark of traditional architecture and the highest standards of craftsmanship, often considered somewhat antiquated. This monograph examines 11 recent exemplary projects and analyses their basic underlying features in an extensive essay. Selected texts by Hans Kollhoff himself shed light on his approach to architecture and the background of his works. Synopsis

The most important buildings from the 1990s exemplify the architecture of Hans Kollhoff in this book. His work is counted among the most sophisticated bodies of architecture currently created. The projects are characterized by an insistence on a level of craftsmanship and quality that is often considered unfeasible when measured against contemporary construction techniques. Grounded in theory, Kollhoff defends the architectural and urban conventions of the European city and argues for specifying high-quality materials and carefully crafted details. He considers the science of planning and building-up of an architectural structure, as the basic principle of an architecture that exhausts itself neither programmatically nor stylistically. Kollhoff's international reputation is based on his unconventional housing projects: such as the KNSM Island block in Amsterdam that was designed within the framework of Jo Coenen's master plan; and on his projects: such as the winning competition design for Berlin Alexander-platz, which will determine the future of this prominent location and has led to very controversial discussions.
